[Correspondence of the New York Evening Post.] The Pike's Peak Pinchbeck-Sumers, KANSAS, March 25, 1859.

A recent tour through the eastern and northern portion of the territory has given me an opportunity of observing the character and value extent of the emigration to the gold fields of the West. The Pike's Peak fever gravated type, and will take its place in the guard of the great army whose sounds of preputation come to us from the states and terri ories along the frontier. The roads are already populous with trains. Some of the wi ser ones have teams of mules or oxen, with e wagons clausily made and canvass cov dacy of Auditor of State ered, containing camp and cooking equipage and the simpler necessaries of life. I observe in nearly all a kind of painful eagerness to learn the truth of the matter; an ill concealed suspicion that the worst is to come, and the Mr. Stone is understood to be a candidate cross farce of Frazer River to be researced for reselection to the office of State Treasure evenes between the Missouri and Cherry iter for the office-hence it is important for

Is It a Trick?

In the Ohio State Journal, a writer signir himself "Republican," very emphatically non inates Cynos PRESTISS, Esq., of Ravenna, for " Auditor of S ate !"

This is decidedly refreshing, when it is co year book as, pas excellence, the swindle of 1859. There is a recklessness, an intataation an igoorance, about the movements of the larger portion of the gold seekers, which seems the prospects of Mr. Pressus, as the fortieth to be the result of frenzy and prophetic of candidate exceedingly flattering! I am in-clined to think it will be a great necessity that will induce the Governor to call this Legislature together. Secretar 1: 183.

Provisions is made for enlargement of the Ohio Ponitentary, by extending the walls on the east endered as new building for cells within it. This is a measure of absolute necessity, as the number of convicts is now some eighty more than the number of cells. This difficulty is at present obviated by appropriating the hospital and the chapel for elecping rooms for those whose term have nearly expired, or are otherwise rendered docile or harm'ess. This is of course a dangerous as well as expensive and inconvenient recourse. The whole number of slaws passed at this session, is $220, with 61 Joint Resolutions. The great and crowning measure of the sessionregarded by the Democracy at the time of its pastage-bas proved the veriest fizzle that was over enacted into the shape of a law. I refer to the famous police bill for Cincinnati. The result of the Charter Electron in that City, last Monday, was so overwhelming to the D-mocracy, and was so demonstrative or the condemnation of the people, of a measure intended really to curtail their constitutional franchise, that the Commissioners appointout having appointed a single policeman, or permittee and any act by virtue of their appointment. The estensible reason for this course, was, to save the City from the expense of defending a suit commenced by the Attorney pense of defending a suit commenced by the Attorney agents everywhere. entiment against the measure.

I do not know on what grounds the Attorney Gener proposed to show the law unconstitutional; but it reem ome high time that a certain class of legislation for the sole benefit of Cincinnati, and which cannot possibly apply to any other part of the State, under the appearance of general laws, should be arrested, on the ground that providen on that an ject, by the pretence of applying to Of course the suit goes by the board, with the regul

Probably they will take advice of the Attorney General upon the subject, moments snatched from time devoted to regular duties. permit me to gratefully acknowledge your courtesy as

Elis. Democras:

The Legislature adjourned at one or two o'clock Thursday morning, having extended the session a day by joint resolution. While recording the auspicious termination of the extraordinary assion; it is also pleasant to be able to say that none of the measures of a revolutionary character, by which it was proposed to punish the Republicane—as repealing all constitutional laws relating to the Penlitentiary and State Hense and the like—were passed into laws. Probably the majority had the sagastry to see that such measure would be likely to result in the smallest possible amount of capping or spoils to the party—their "seven principles" being sumarily comprehended in those two words. The sumal appropriation tills—the only really essential legislation of the sees to—were passed, as usual, at the last moment. That was reduced to the lowest possible for the completion of the interest of the former of the former lars in addition allowed for setting out trees, and other work in the graded or west side of the State House Yard. This comprises all the work to be done this year. No provision is made for grading the east side of the yard, or removing the unsightly buildings and the pentitentiary fence from that portion of the ground. As this work must be done eventually, and as there is no probability that it can be done at a future time to better advantage, its postponement can only be the result of a supposed great party necessity. All the expense of superintendence, architecture, &c., are just as great for the secomplishment of the little that is all lowed to be done, as it would be for the completion of the work, which would be entirely practicable, during the present year.

The appropriations for superintendence and repairs of the Public works, were not included in the General Appropriation bill, as usual; but are made in a separate bill, the passage of which was the very last business of the session, and necessarily occasions the joint resolution for deferring the adjournment a day. All attempts to restore the canal contracts, which had been shroyated by the Supreme Court, having failed, to the great grief and scandal of a portion of the party, a new project was sprung upon the testilature, at the last moment, intended as a partial relief to the necessities moment, intended as a partial relief to the necessities will. The money market has varied but little in its general bearing throughout the week eighted aince our last review. But little first class paper is rejected at the discount houses, and some of them could increase their line without inconvenience. Rates are unwaried—9 to 12 per cent, with an idcreasing supply of currency at most of the banks.

There is not much demand from manufacturers, but the market is without any particular change to note.

The stock is light for the season, and the week's sales confined to some 55@90,800 hs, pulled and freece, in small lots, within the range of quotations.
